Question/Comment:	Answer:
Brushart: So you did not find any villages on site?	Burks: No, not villages, but we did find places where a few families were moving around, maybe collecting nuts, plants. We found areas where there had been a lot of cooking.
Huber: Site A & B is near the proposed site for a cell. One site could be impacted by the cell if it was built there. The National

Historic Perseveration Group wanted to know what the Consulting Parties thought about what they should do with these sites. Cover them up with a protective cover, learn what they can now then forget about it or cover it up and not mess with it. What kind of preservation recommendation would you recommend? Would you learn what you can now then forget about it or keep it protected, or cover it up and not do anything with them?	Burks: We used the best techniques that we have at the time. I hope in the future they have better techniques for doing what we do today, so they might be able to find more in the future than we can now. But that is a tough call.
